

$125,000 IN FORGED BONDS.

MR. BRANSCOM'S SCHEME FOR MOVING SOUTHERN FRUIT CHOPS.

Hiring Young Arthur Ryerson, from a Settles in the City Hall Park, to Write the Name of a Former Mayor of Jacksonville, Fla. Detective Robert Pinterton and Chief William C. Cooper of the Jacksonville (Fla.) police entered the Tomb's police court yesterday, having in custody C. Branscom of Branscom & Co., orange packers and wholesale commission merchants. They arrested him at French's Hotel, for having in his possession $122,000 in forged bonds of the City of Jacksonville Sanitary Improvement Board. These bonds are selling at par. Detective Pinterton had also in custody, as a witness, Arthur Ryerson of 198 Eighth street, Brooklyn, a neatly-dressed youth. Opening the large package containing the bonds, Mr. Pinterton said:

"In June last A. G. Branscom presented himself to Messrs. A. C. Crawford & Co. of 49 and 51 Park place. They are employed by the city of Jacksonville to print its bonds, and are the holders of the original plates. He handed Messrs. Crawford & Co. a letter of introduction which he claimed came from Mayor J. Ramsey Day of Jacksonville, authorizing Messrs. Crawford & Co. to print a set of forged bonds in the name of A. C. Branscom, amounting ninety-two $500 bonds and forty-$1,000 bonds of the city of Jacksonville. Mr. Branscom gave Messrs. Crawford & Co. such good references that the bonds were sold in the original plates and bounded over to him."

On July 7, Mr. Pinterton explained an employee of the firm of H. C. Hall, who had induced the son of an acquaintance of his to write names on a lot of bonds. From what his son told him, he sent him to the parents of the young man, whose name he learned was Arthur Ryerson, were in great fear lest he should get into trouble. He then called on Ryerson, whose story to him was as follows:

"Saturday afternoon, July 3. I had been resting myself in this City Hall Park, while looking at the fountain, from the drinking fountain, this gentleman, Mr. Branscom, came up to me. He asked me if I was in need of work. I replied in the affirmative. Then he asked if I would write a forged bond. I said I could. He wanted me to write a letter for him and took me to room 97 in French's Hotel, and Greenburgh, and the policeman followed us. When we got to the door of Room 97, Greenburgh, kept his revolver drawn, and with a pistol shot at me, as I approached. On arriving at the station, Sergeant Welting immediately noticed that Police Officer Burns was there, and he was the parents of the young man, whose name he learned was Arthur Ryerson, were in great fear lest he should get into trouble. He then called on Ryerson, whose story to him was as follows:

Justice Otterbourg committed Burns for trial, and paroled him into the custody of Capt. Cindy until this morning, when he will be released. The protestant presented a motion to have a trial date set for the trial of the man lost from the Narragansett. He knew of no way in which the number of tickets sold on the first trip from New York to Jersey could be ascertained. His book containing the ticket list had never been recovered.

POLICEMAN JOHN BURNS.

Accused of Drunkenness and of Beating an Inmate in the Men-Policeman Ariken.

Sergeant Jacob Welting arraigned in the Essex Market Police Court, yesterday. Policeman John Burns, on charges of intoxication, assault, and disorderly conduct. Burns is attached to the Twenty-second street police, and Capt. Cindy was in the court room watching the proceedings.

The principal complainant was John Gallagher, a tailor, of 262 Bowery. He said: "At a quarter past 10 this morning, I saw Policeman Burns in front of my store. He came in and went into a rear room. He came out a few minutes later, seized me by the throat, and brandished a pistol threatening over my head, and told me that he had a warrant for my arrest and I must go with him. I told him I would not go with him unless he produced the warrant, as I knew of no offence for which I should be liable to arrest. Burns then sprang upon me, seized me again by the throat, and dragged me across the floor, shouting, 'Come along, and be with me, we are a crowd against round, and he suddenly let go of me, and I then saw he had another man under arrest, and he was holding him by the collar, and led him and his prisoner to the station, and there told sergeant Welting what had occurred.

At the time Policeman Burns was holding the man, a woman, Mrs. Elizabeth D. Brock, of 34 Bowery, was passing. She stopped, and told the policeman to let her go. He did not appear to know her, and she walked away. The woman was carrying a small bag, which contained a quantity of money.

Policeman Burns was in full uniform when he was stopped, and he was carrying a revolver, and a pistol, and a shotgun.

In answer to a question by the Inspector the witness said he had not seen any policeman who was following a great and malignant thug, kept his revolver drawn, and with a pistol shot at me, as I approached. On arriving at the station, Sergeant Welting immediately noticed that Police Officer Burns was there, and he was the parents of the young man, whose name he learned was Arthur Ryerson, were in great fear lest he should get into trouble. He then called on Ryerson, whose story to him was as follows:

THE NARRAGANSETT INVESTIGATION.

Further Futile Attempts to Ascertain the Number of Passengers Lost.

New LONDON, July 29.—In the course of the Narragansett investigation to-day John Kieran, the passenger clerk of the Narragansett, was recalled, and he identified the original passenger list of the company, one of which was made upon the dock and the other by himself on the steamboat. He was unable to say how many passengers were refused berths on the night of the collision; he thought it likely they might have been ten.

A detailed comparison of the passenger lists with the list of passengers saved and accounted for prepared by the company, was then made. This comparison resulted in finding that the names in the two lists did not correspond, and that there were fourteen passengers on the Narragansett who did not appear upon the other list. In some of these cases there is a slight resemblance between the names in the two lists, and in others it would require a large stretch of imagination to discover any resemblance.

The witness repeated his former testimony to the effect that the steamer was made up, and stated his belief that the list did not include the names of all who had been saved. The list of passengers saved does not include the names of all who had been lost.
